The Faculty Institute for Inclusive Teaching:

• Brings together faculty across campus to explore promising practices around diversity and inclusiveness in the classroom.
• Supports faculty in identifying course specific improvements.
• Establishes a cross-disciplinary network of faculty who may serve as resources for each other.

Workshop Facilitator: Dr. Kristie A. Ford, Professor of Sociology and Director of the Center for Leadership, Teaching, and Learning (CLTL) at Skidmore College. The Founder of Skidmore’s Intergroup (IGR) Relations Program, Dr. Ford helps educators think deeply about how to achieve inclusive and just learning communities with the use of case studies, self-awareness exercises, dialogue, and instructional skills.

Requirements

• Tenure-track or non-tenure-track faculty member.
• Must be engaged in undergraduate teaching.
• Submit an individual action plan outlining 1-3 short-term SMART goals and related materials, such as a syllabus or lecture plan you will develop or revise (within a month of completing the Institute).
• Write a report on how your participation in the Institute has impacted your teaching (within a year of completing the Institute). Include outcome data related to your inclusive teaching goals, if available.

After the Institute, there will be opportunities for faculty to reconnect and discuss progress made on their action plans, as well as any diversity-related challenges that have emerged.

Faculty who are new to conversations about diversity and inclusive teaching are especially encouraged to apply. A committee of tenure-track and non-tenure-track faculty with experience in diversity and inclusive pedagogy will select participants based on the proposals submitted. We seek faculty representing diverse disciplinary backgrounds and experiences. Participants who complete this program will receive a $1,000 honorarium.
