ABOUT THE FILM

“Why is it easier to visualize a Black man in an orange jumpsuit than it is in a white coat?” Fed up with the lack of diversity among doctors, a medical doctor sets out to explore why only 2% of American doctors are Black men and what that means for society. This 80-minute documentary dissects the systemic barriers preventing Black men from becoming medical doctors and the consequences on society at large. View trailer.

FROM THE CREATOR

“I’m a black male doctor. I’ve sat in class while my professor used the ‘N’ word. I’ve been mistaken for hospital transport rather than the doctor that I am. I’ve been approached by police so they could search my friend’s trunk unwarranted. I’ve been told that I dress funny, speak poorly and would never be successful. If these things happen to me as a doctor, what happens to other black men? What will happen to my sons? This is why I started Black Men In White Coats and why I decided to produce the film Black Men In White Coats.” — Dale Okorodudu, MD, executive producer and founder of Black Men In White Coats, University of Missouri class of 2006, MU School of Medicine class of 2010

POST-FILM DISCUSSIONS
